National City, is a centrally located historically rich region of San Diego and delivers one of Southern California's healthiest business climates. Heavy daytime traffic coming from inland, South Bay, and across the border has increased residency in the urban suburb creating a melting pot of restaurants and business opportunity.

What is Happening Around National City

Pier 32 Marina

Pier 32 is a private 250-slip leisure marina that is a go-to for tenants to enjoy a delicious meal, participate in boat-centric activities, or simply relax by the water. The marina is joined by waterfront gem, Pepper Park, a colorful 5-acres enabling gatherings with picnic tables, play areas, pier fishing, sports courts, and a bike trail.

Historic Sites

Experiencing the historic roots of Southern California comes easy in a city established in 1887. Heritage Square's charming block takes visitors back in time with Brick Row's Victorian-era homes. San Diego's rich streetcar and rail history is showcased by Santa Fe Rail Depot, the last original terminal in the United States, and the National City Depot with artifacts dating back to the 1900s.

Market on 8th

South Bay's first ever food hall houses 2 lifestyle vendors and 12 unique food eateries offering an array of diverse cuisine from Southeast Asia, Latin America to Cajun BBQ. The market has brought an emphasis on community with shared tables, local vendors, artists, and events for all to enjoy at this 9,000 square foot hall conjoined with a 2,000 square foot beer garden.

Industrial Port

The daytime population is a mix of industrial maritime and Naval officers. The Naval base stretches over 13 piers as a homeport to 54 ships with plans to expand in 2023. Southbound of the Navy base, National City Marine Terminal generates millions of dollars annually through its advanced facility capabilities to import/export over 500,000 foreign vehicles per year.
